

universidade de aveiro
theoria poiesis praxis

CLC

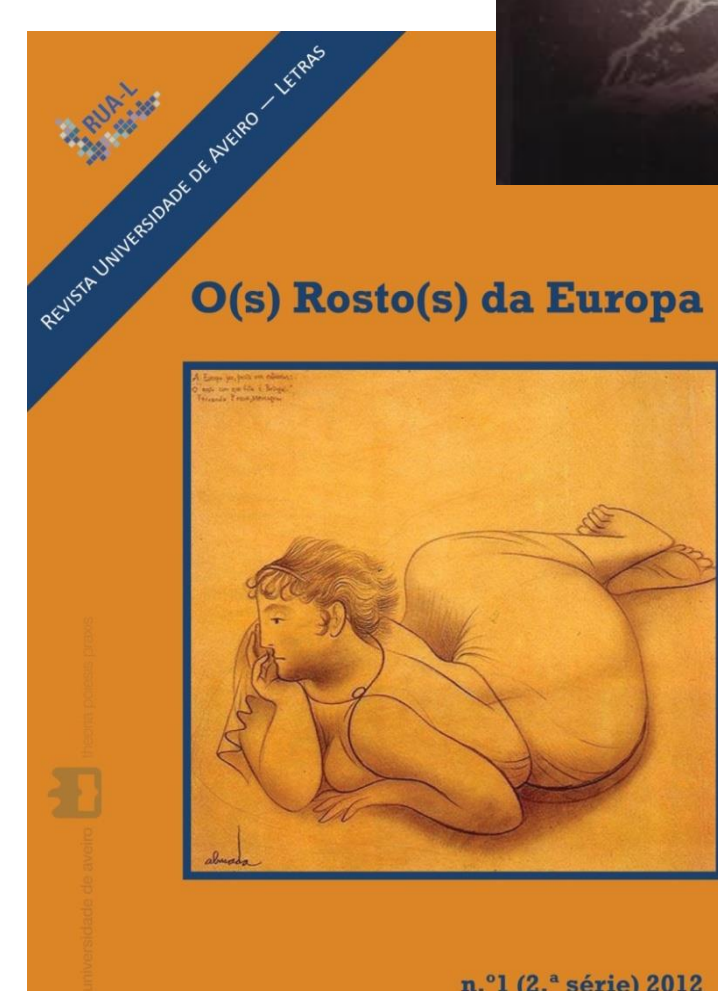

Centre for Languages and Cultures

The Centre for Languages and Cultures has 75 research members. 62 of these members have doctorates; 13 are following PhD courses. There are 15 additional associate members collaborating with the Centre. The Centre promotes research in various Humanities related fields, specifically in the areas of Literature, Culture and Language Sciences. CLC is subdivided into two large research groups:

I. Literary and Cultural Studies II. Language Sciences

It currently produces 4 journals:

1. Ágora: Estudos Clássicos em Debate (indexed on Latindex, the ISI Web of Knowledge's Arts and Humanities Citation Index and Scopus).
2. forma breve (indexed on Qualis CAPES).
3. RUA-L. Revista da UA - Letras
4. Teografias

I. Literary and Cultural Studies

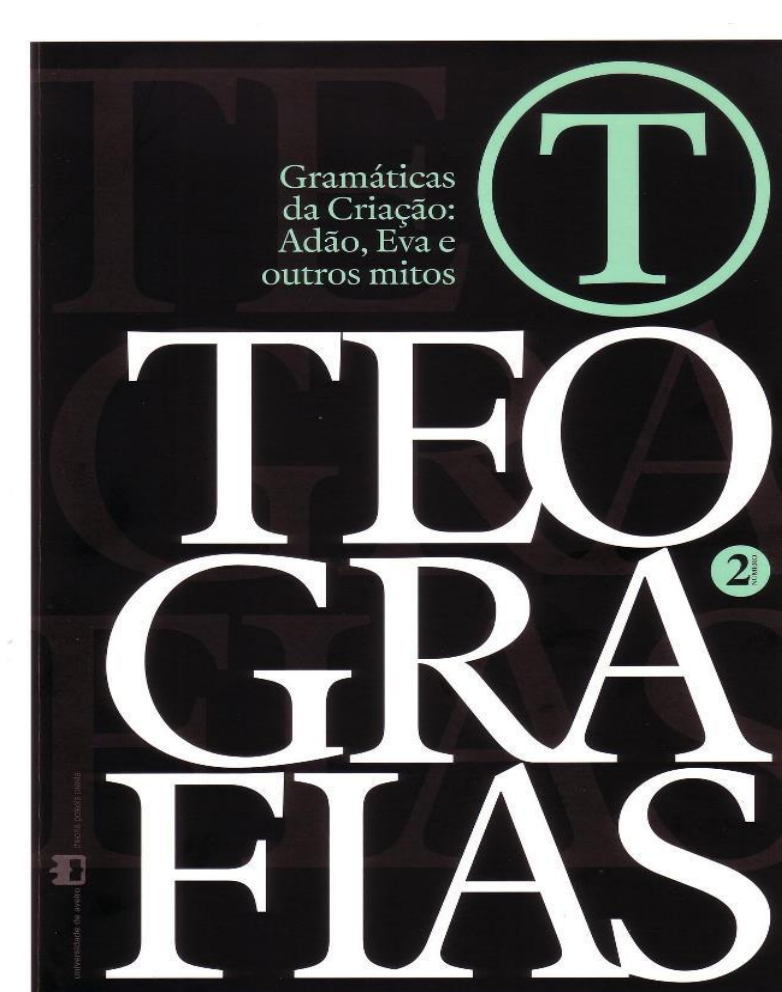

With a close focus on the interplay between culture and literature and on the interaction of discourses, this research group explores:

- the description, analysis and diffusion of literary forms with all their inter-semiotic and pluri- systemic implications. Specific attention is paid to Portuguese literature and its classical paradigms, as well as to Brazilian and African literatures in Portuguese;
- trans- and intercultural relations, establishing links between various linguistic-cultural domains and opening up dialogues between different national contexts;
- intercultural hermeneutics in the construction and deconstruction of national and supranational identities;
- dynamics of textual transformation, literary mediation and communication;
- the intersections of literature and science and those of literature and religion;
- transmediality and intermediality.

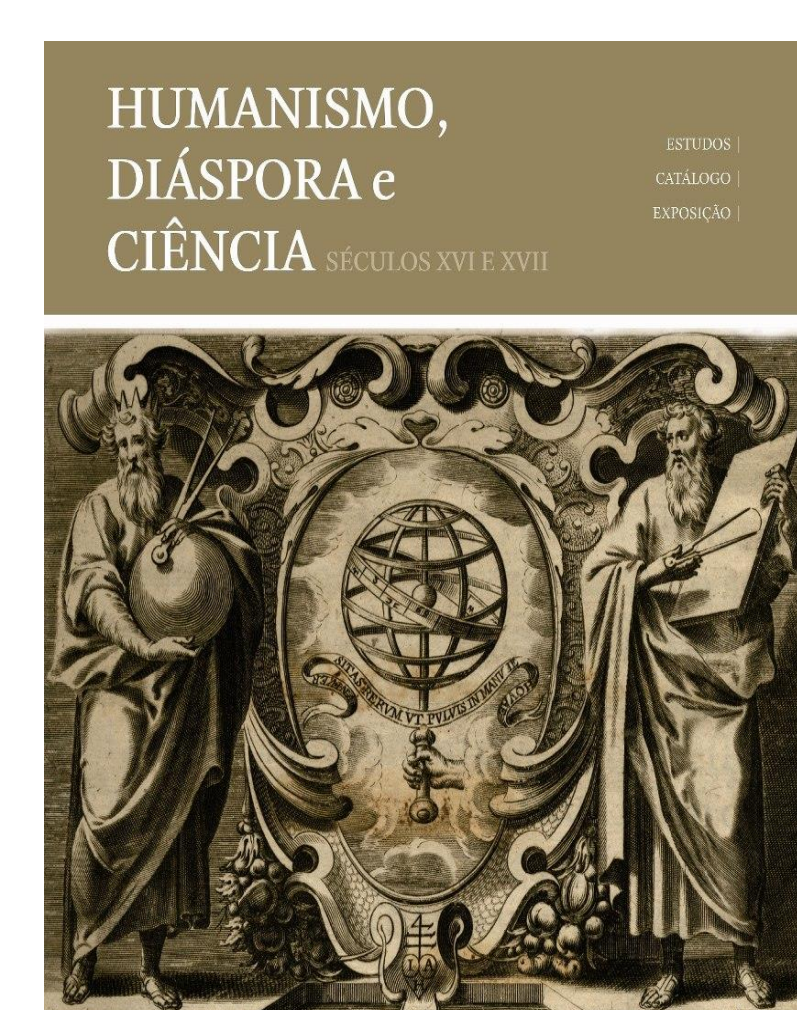

The Literary and Cultural Studies Group and the Language Sciences Group work together on a number of research lines, particularly in regards to intercultural communication and translation.

Projects financed by the FCT

1. Theography: Literature and Religion (PTDC/CLE-LLI/103619/2008:

2. Dioscórides and Portuguese Humanism: the commentaries of Amato Lusitano (PTDC/CLE-LLI/101238/2008)

Felix Vallotton
Sarah Affonso
Menez
Edward Hopper
Vanessa Bell
Almada Negreiros
Harald Metzkes

II. Language Sciences Group

The main focuses of the Language Sciences Group are the study of language and its variant forms, languages and the exchanges that take place between them, the technologies which accentuate and accelerate these processes, the various means and modes of linguistic intervention and the results which emerge from these processes.

The scope of research includes:

- Linguistic variation
- Translation, Terminology and Technical Communication

